Clinical Innovations:

My main research focuses on lifestyle behaviors and cardiometabolic risk factors and diseases, including the key dietary targets and policy strategies to address lifestyle and reduce risk. I also collaborated with Dr. Wayne Levy at U. of Washington to develop the Seattle Heart Failure Model (SHFM), a validated model that predicts survival in heart failure patients, including 5-year mortality and total life expectancy, and determines mortality effects of adding specific drugs or devices to any patient's regimen. Both PC and handheld versions have been released for clinical use, free-of-charge (<http://depts.washington.edu/shfm>); and the SHFM is part of Epocrates tool kit (www.epocrates.com/products/medtools/cardiologuessentials.html).
